Description

Although these tables have been used as library furniture they are very versatile and can function as dining or centre tables. They can be joined end-to-to end to create a massive table 6metres long. They have a pared-down Gothic form which work in period and contemporary interiors. The mahogany has mellowed into a lovely honey colour over time.

The rectangular tops with cleated edges. The base with three curved supports each with carved roundels on turned pillars united by a rectangular stretcher on trestle feet. Original mellow color and patina.

Provenance: West Country Institution.
