Description

For centuries, the exotic shape of nautilus, found in the western Pacific, has inspired architects, artists, and designers from Grecian columns, to spiral staircases, or C16 nautilus cups. Introducing exotic, elegance and conversation into the interior. Tiffany patented his design for the Nautilus lampshade, one of his earliest ideas for leaded-glass lampshades, on May 2, 1899; a time when shells were highly collectable. The original was made from stained glass, this is made from polyresin for safety and brass that has been bronzed. It is a beautiful, exotic table lamp. Height 47cm., 19 inches. Width - 22cm, 9 inches.
